

I worry about who has the time and energy to be creative and how torn I can be between creativity feeling like it's a demand now in every area of life and yet still a desire to create and to share with others.
This is a micro manifesto to express the sometimes uncomfortable tension between how hard it can be to be creative when life is hard work, and the tug of imagining and making things that is the joy of a creative life.
This is an invitation to you to articulate your understanding of the uncomfortable zone of creativity in life.

Generated with <https://kome.ai>