

This paragraph highlights that some teachers might be feeling uncomfortable in students stating that they have used GenAI and not clearly knowing how to react to that. In a way that uncertainty is impacting the students' confidence.

This seed triggered a question for me:
why are teachers feeling uncomfortable?

Part of the answer for me links to the paper written by McCusker in 2023, 'Where educators can benefit from the wisdom of clowns.'

He states that educators need to feel under control and always having all the answers, and that might be preventing teachers to acknowledge that they themselves need to learn about GenAI and explore technology with curiosity and openness.
